

Anne Courtney Coach, Facilitator and Leadership Consultant

Anne Courtney is a highly experienced coach, leadership consultant, coach trainer and retreat facilitator operating as a Perth-based Alliance Partner of Newfield Institute.

She works with leaders in organisations, to both support them in these complex roles as well as equipping them, both personally and professionally, for the task of leading. Anne also facilitates teams to work on their collective leadership capacity and improve their functioning, productivity and work satisfaction.

Anne creates safe and respectful learning spaces for individuals, teams and organisations to increase their ability to observe, manage and change their own behaviours as well as increase the quality and effectiveness of their interactions and working relationships.

Since 2003, Anne has worked with clients from the non-government and public sectors across a range of industry sectors including health, aged care, education, community and Indigenous services. Prior to this, Anne gained 25 years experience working in the community sector in the spheres of direct client services as a social worker, in community development projects, in management and leadership roles.

Anne has been involved in training professional coaches since 2003 as a facilitator, mentor coach and examiner for the ICF accredited Coach School Diploma of Professional Coaching program. She now works in the Newfield Institute coach training programs as a supervisor and facilitator.
